

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

I so want this job!

Learning Outcome

Discuss factual and abstract information about common everyday or job-related topics in both work and social contexts appropriate for the interlocutor.

Ask your partner:

- Who helps you when you look for a new job?
- How can another person, like a headhunter, help you find a job?

Can Do Statements

- I can request or report facts about events or actions related to work and jobs.
- I can express true, untrue, and possible events in present and in past.
- I can give a supported argument about a work-related process.

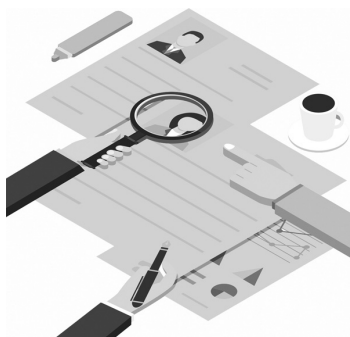

Let's Explore!

Adam sends his résumé to Mr. Goldstein, a headhunter.

* The word "résumé" can also be written as resume. You can also say C.V.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Adam: My friend Kristi just got a job as an editorial assistant at BFP, and she said there might be another position available. She said I was a shoo-in, but the job that she talked about is no longer posted on the company website.
- Hayley: Oh, that's too bad. Maybe they will upload another position. Why don't you contact a headhunter in the field? I know someone. His name is Andrew Goldstein. He may be able tell you who is hiring and which companies are the best ones to work for.
- Adam: OK, he might be able to help me. I'll write to him now.

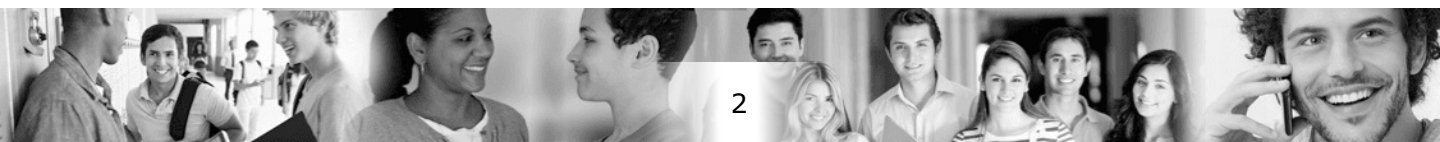

Dear Mr. Goldstein,

Allow me to introduce myself. My name is Adam Bari. Ms. Hayley Sanders, who is my friend, suggested that I write to you. Perhaps I could benefit from your services. I reckon you have helped many people like me in the past.

I would be very interested in working in the area of communications. I am a recent graduate in the field. I imagine you have seen from my résumé that I worked as a copy editor and a proofreader at a campus newspaper, where I also sold advertising space. I am very interested in positions such as web content editor, editorial assistant or copy editor. I take great pride in my writing style. I suppose you have thought of ways of promoting a candidate's written work. I have established a substantial portfolio of written work that you may be interested in viewing. I look forward to talking to you further about employment opportunities in communications, and how you could assist me with my job search.

Sincerely,

Adam Bari

Let's Practice!

Adam asks Mr. Goldstein for help.

Instructions: Read the sentences below and circle the incorrect words.

1. I reckon to you have helped many people like me in the past.
2. I imagine you been have seen from my résumé that I worked as a copy editor and proofreader at a campus newspaper, where I also sold advertising space.
3. I suppose you have be thought of ways of promoting a candidate's written work.
4. I assume you have going facilitated several job applications before.
5. I imagine you are have established yourself to be one of the top headhunters in the field.

Let's Practice!

Adam e-mails the headhunter.

Instructions: Write the correct phrase to complete each sentence. Choose from the options in the Word Bank.

Word Bank

might be / may be able / could benefit / would be very

1. Perhaps I _____ benefit from your service.
2. She said there _____ another position available.
3. I _____ interested in working in the area of communications.
4. He _____ to tell which companies are the best ones to work for.

Extension Activity

Write a letter to a headhunter asking for their services.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Start with the date and opening salutation of a letter.
- Introduce yourself.
- Explain what kind of a job you are looking for.
- Explain what you have done in the past that would help you get the job.
- Ask questions about how the headhunter can help you.
- Conclude the letter with a final closing.
- Write a total of 100 - 120 words. Make sure you use correct spelling and punctuation.
- Read your letter aloud to a partner.

Self-Assessment

Yes No

I write a letter following the correct structure (date, salutation, closing).

☐ ☐

I write about my past work experiences.

☐ ☐

I ask appropriate questions.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- to be a shoo-in (expression): someone who is certain to succeed
e.g. She said I was a shoo-in for the job.
- to be posted (expression): to publish something so that everyone knows what is happening
e.g. The job that she talked about is no longer posted on the company website.
- headhunter (noun): a person whose job is to find employees for available positions e.g. Why don't you contact a headhunter in the field?
- allow me to introduce myself (expression): used in a letter to introduce yourself to someone you don't know e.g. Allow me to introduce myself. My name is Adam Bari.
- employment (noun): job; position
e.g. I look forward to talking to you further about employment opportunities in communications.
- to benefit (verb): to profit; to take advantage of e.g. Perhaps I could benefit from your services.

Learning Points

Present Perfect with Comment Verbs or Phrases

You can use the Present Perfect with verbs like reckon, imagine and suppose when you want to comment or report on what has been done.

When you use the Present Perfect, you refer to things that happened in the past but have a connection to the present. This is useful when you talk about how things affect you and your current situation.

For example:

I reckon you have met many people like me.

I imagine you have seen from my résumé that I worked as a copy editor and proofreader at a campus newspaper, where I also sold advertising space.

I suppose you have established a portfolio of your written work.

The past participle of the main verb must be used in the Present Perfect tense.

Look at the chart for the past participles of some verbs:

Verb	Past Participle	Example
be	been	you have been
establish	established	you have established
help	helped	you have helped
see	seen	you have seen from my résumé ...

Examples:

- I reckon you have helped many people like me in the past.
- I suppose you have thought of ways of promoting a candidate's written work.

Learning Points

Modals to Express True and Untrue in the Present Tense

Modals are helping verbs. They add meaning to the main verbs of a sentence. They help convey the speaker's intentions, feelings and attitudes toward a topic.

Common modals you hear in business settings are:

could might may

Perhaps I could benefit from your services.

You use the modal could to express possibility in both the past and present.

For example:

I could help you build your network of contacts and give you strategies for building your online presence.

You use the modal would to create conditional verb forms. It also serves as the past form of the modal verb "will."

For example:

I would be very interested in working in the area of communications.

You use might and may to express certainty about past and present actions or events.

For example:

He may be able to tell you who is hiring and which companies are the best ones to work for.

My friend Kristi just got a job as an editorial assistant at BFP, and she said there might be another position available.

Examples:

- You could assist me with my job search.
- I would have established a substantial portfolio.
- They might/may be able to find some employment opportunities for you.

