

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Times have changed!

Learning Outcome

Discuss factual and abstract information about common everyday or job related topics in both work and social contexts appropriate for the interlocutor.

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about jobs, professions and careers.
- I can talk about my experiences.
- I can talk about my academic studies and my work in various time frames.

Ask your partner:

- Do you think things are different for a person looking for a job now than they were before? How are they different?
- How did your parents or other family members and friends get their jobs?

Let's Explore!

Mr. Brody chats with Adam about the future of traditional news sources

* "Traditional news sources" are daily newspapers or important magazines like The Times.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Boris: Well, you are quite the determined young man.
- Adam: A person has to be in today's job market, Mr. Brody.
- Boris: When I was a boy, publishers came running after you, hoping to find someone who could put a sentence together. Why do you want to be a journalist?
- Adam: I want to write stories that express the voice of a person who otherwise would not be heard, to a large audience.
- Boris: Why do you want to work with online content?
- Adam: People are getting their news from online media more now than ever. However, they are still heading towards traditional news sources, expecting to get accurate information. This has inspired me to maintain high standards for content. It is a way of promoting a publication's reputation and brand.
- Boris: Are you optimistic about the future of journalism?
- Adam: Yes, absolutely. The vast majority of traffic flow for news -- over 80% -- is going to established, credible sources. Some media sources have seen their audience increase. They have invested significant sums of money, wanting their online presence to grow even further. I have always felt confident there will always be an audience for a well-written, informative story.
- Boris: What would you say is the purpose of journalism?
- Adam: We all live in our own worlds and we all love to think that we are educated and cultured. Nonetheless, we are still the products of our environment, wanting to follow the same pattern day after day. It is up to journalism to break us out of those confines and let us hear about the issues and the events, and most importantly, the voices of people who are beyond the boundaries of our day-to-day lives.
- Boris: Very impressive, young man. Please bring in two letters of reference.
- Adam: I will do that right away, Mr. Brody.

Let's Practice!

Adam and Boris discuss journalism.

Instructions: Unscramble the words to find the mystery sentence. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

1. now / online / more / ever / news / media / . / are / getting / from / than / People / their

2. Inspired / me / . / has / standars / This / to / for / content / maintain / high

3. Some / . / audience / have / media / seen / sources / increase / their

4. Well / always / an / a / story / always / be / there / I / . / informative / have / felt / will / for / confident / written, / audience

5. in / . / have / own / our / worlds / lived / We

Let's Practice!

Adam talks about why he wants to be a journalist.

Instructions: Choose the option that best completes the text. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

- | | | | | |
|--------------------------------------|---|---|---|---|
| 1
voicing talk
voice | 2
flow traffic
traffic flow
traffic flowing | 3
confines confined confining | 4
content consisting contract | 5
informative informing information |
|--------------------------------------|---|---|---|---|

I want to write stories that express the ¹ _____ of a person who otherwise would not be heard, to a large audience.

The vast majority of ² _____ for news -- over 80% -- is going to established, credible sources. It is up to journalism to break us out of those ³ _____ and let us hear about the issues and the events, and most importantly, the voices of people who are beyond the boundaries of our day-to-day lives. This has inspired me to maintain high standards for ⁴ _____.

I have always felt confident there will always be an audience for a well written, ⁵ _____ story.

Extension Activity

Do a survey about where people get their news.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Ask 10 - 15 people where they get most of their news. For example, do they read a printed newspaper? Do they read articles online? Do they listen to the radio?
- Compile the results of your survey (count the number of people who answered the same thing).
- Prepare a diagram, like a bar graph, to show your results.
- Present your diagram to a partner or to the class.
- Try to interpret (explain) the results. What does the graph show? Why is this the case?

Self-Assessment

Yes No

I ask people about where they get news.

☐ ☐

I prepare a diagram with the results of the survey.

☐ ☐

I present the results to a partner or to a group.

☐ ☐

I interpret the results.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- voice (noun): opinion, point of view
e.g. I want to write stories that express the voice of a person.
- high standards (noun): expectations for quality
e.g. This has inspired me to maintain high standards for content.
- traffic flow (noun): number of people visiting a website
e.g. The vast majority of traffic flow for news -- over 80% -- is going to established, credible sources.
- sources (noun): places where a person gets the information they need to make decisions and form opinions
e.g. However, they are still heading towards traditional news sources, expecting to get accurate information.
- informative (adjective): contains a lot of useful information
e.g. I have always felt confident there will always be an audience for a well written, informative story.
- confines (noun): boundaries; limits
e.g. It is up to journalism to break us out of those confines.

Learning Points

Expressing Reason: -ing Clauses

You can use -ing clauses to express reason.

A clause is a part of a sentence with its own subject and verb. You can use verb+ing in a clause to express reason, relationships, or to explain why something happened. It also allows you to be very specific about the relationship between the two clauses.

For example:

When I was a boy, publishers came running after you, hoping to find someone who could put a sentence together.

This is an alternative to using typical words like because and since to give the reason.

For example, instead of saying

When I was a boy, publishers came running after you because they hoped to find someone who could put a sentence together.

You can use the sentence above.

Varying your style of writing and speech is beneficial in workplace setting as it gives you and your ideas a more dynamic feel and livens up otherwise simplistic language.

Examples:

- People are still heading towards traditional news sources, expecting to get accurate information.
- Newspapers have invested significant sums of money, wanting their online presence to grow even further.

Learning Points

Present Perfect, Simple Present and Present Continuous Tenses

You use a variety of tenses in speaking and writing. Let's compare the Present Perfect, the Simple Present and the Present Continuous Tenses.

You use the Present Perfect tense to talk about a past action with present consequences. You often use it to refer to experiences that you have and are related to a present task or situation.

For example:

This has inspired me to maintain high standards for content in journalism.

You use the Simple Present tense to talk about a habit or an event scheduled in the future.

For example:

We all live in our own worlds and we all love to think that we are educated and cultured.

You use the Present Continuous to refer to things that are happening at the moment of speaking or planned future events.

For example:

People are getting their news from online media more now than ever.

